A MESSAGE FROM MARSHALL HEALTH

When you refer your patients to Marshall Health, you want to know that they are receiving the best care. Our board-certified, fellowship-trained physicians bring a level of expertise and experience to more than 65 specialties that you want for your patients. Our physicians, however, are just one component of the care team model your patients experience at Marshall Health. During more than 560,000* patient visits during 2017, nursing staff, clinical pharmacists, patient care coordinators, perioperative staff and many others were part of the coordinated care provided by Marshall Health.

The new initiatives and specialties we launched in 2017 are further evidence that patients are our #1 priority. You'll see Marshall Health continue to meet relevant needs in patient care in 2018.

Certainly, the highlight of 2017 was opening our newly renovated, 51,000 square foot multispecialty building in Teays Valley, West Virginia. This outpatient facility now houses more than 32 Marshall Health providers and added specialties like sports medicine, spine care and neurology to the list of services we provide in Putnam County.

With a growing senior adult population in West Virginia and the tristate, Marshall Health expanded services for adults 55 and older with new providers and the newly established Center for Healthy Aging and the Senior Pain & Wellness Center.

A new accredited neurology residency program was approved to begin in 2018. The four-year program will train up to three residents per year, beginning July 1, and will help the school of medicine and Marshall Health continue to bring advancements in neurologic care to our region. New child and adolescent psychiatry and geriatric psychiatry fellowships will add new opportunities for expanded assessment, diagnosis and treatment of children, adolescents and their families.

As the region's only academic health system, we are committed to a growing research enterprise aimed at improving both the practice of medicine and patient care. With more than 40 clinical trials currently underway in collaboration with the Marshall University Joan C. Edwards School of Medicine and Edwards Comprehensive Cancer Center, Marshall researchers are making medical advances in fields like cancer, liver disease, obesity and pneumonia as well as health disparities important to the people of West Virginia and Appalachia.

Finally, as we rounded out 2017, we announced our new Maier professor of addiction sciences, who will spearhead addiction-related research and clinical initiatives in the newly formed division of addiction services within the department of family & community health. Learn more about new and evolving addiction-related initiatives at Marshall Health and the school of medicine on page 4.

In this year's provider directory, we also opened up advertising space to our hospital partners. Our relationship with these and many other hospitals, physician groups and volunteer physicians make our work as a community-based medical school possible.

Thank you for partnering with us in 2018.

COMMUNITY IN CRISIS: Marshall's response to the opioid epidemic

Marshall University formed a substance use recovery coalition in October 2016 to find holistic solutions to the addiction problem and its negative effects on our region. The school of medicine and Marshall Health have expanded and developed a number of initiatives, including those outlined below, in recent months to address this public health crisis. Critical areas of research at the school of medicine related to the crisis include Neonatal Abstinence Syndrome (NAS), neurobiology and neuropharmacology. Below are a few highlights of the programs that have been launched.

Healthy Connections. Unites more than 25 local groups to make a greater impact in the regional community. The program serves as a clearinghouse to help those affected by substance use to identify treatment options and support services including trained recovery coaches, child care and life skills.

Marshall Health's recovery center for families will provide residential treatment services for pregnant and postpartum women with substance use disorders and their children. This project is funded through a $2.8 million grant from the West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources Ryan Brown Addiction Prevention and Recovery Fund and will be located in the Huntington City Mission's former 18-unit transitional living complex known as Project Hope.

Maternal Addiction Recovery Center (MARC). Provides comprehensive obstetrical care, outpatient addiction care and counseling for expectant mothers with opiate addiction. This program has been in place since 2012, but has expanded in recent months. MARC is a registered office-based medication-assisted treatment program through the West Virginia Department of Health and Human Resources. Call 304-691-8730 for referrals or more information.

PROACT. New addiction care initiative sponsored by Cabell Huntington Hospital, St. Mary's Medical Center and Marshall Health will act as a single-accessible service hub to treat substance use disorders, including medication-assisted treatment (MAT), 12-step facilitation, peer recovery support and couple/family therapy.

Quick Response Teams. In partnership with the City of Huntington and coordinated by Cabell County Emergency Services, our Quick Response Teams (QRT) first deployed in December 2017. QRTs include a police officer, an EMT and either a recovery coach or clinician who follow up with people who have overdosed to help them get into treatment.

Daniel Langleben, M.D.

Maier Professor & Director of Addiction Sciences

Dr. Daniel Langleben will join our team in 2018 to lead the school of medicine's new division of addiction sciences within the Department of Family & Community Health. An addiction psychiatry specialist & researcher at University of Pennsylvania Perelman School of Medicine, Dr. Langleben is board-certified in psychiatry and neurology, with special qualification in addiction psychiatry, and a Distinguished Fellow of the Annenberg Public Policy Center.

Department of Pathology

Interim Chair: Krista L. Denning, M.D.

Physician Inquiries: 304-691-8850

Marshall Pathology works collaboratively with other clinicians at area hospitals to evaluate your lab work and, with your doctor, determine the best course of treatment. Our experienced pathologists at Marshall Health evaluate specimens at Cabell Huntington Hospital, St. Mary's Medical Center and Pleasant Valley Hospital. In addition to serving patients at those facilities and at Marshall Health, Marshall Pathology provides services to other area facilities and physicians' offices—accepting specimens or cases for diagnosis or consult.

Location

Marshall Pathology is based at:

Douglass Centre

1448 10th Avenue • Huntington, WV 25701

Robotic Expertise

The art of minimally invasive surgery is breaking human boundaries in the hands of our experts.

We are Cabell Huntington Hospital, and this is our home. Ours is the place where surgeons are getting patients back to their lives faster and with smaller incisions for less pain and scarring through the expertise of minimally invasive surgery. We do it by placing today's most advanced robotic technology in the hands of the region's most experienced and skilled team of specialists. It's the place where small incisions are the best decision.

James Jensen, MD, FACS – Urologic Surgeon
Interim Medical Director, Edwards Comprehensive Cancer Center

Dr. Jensen is recognized as a national leader in robotic surgery. Specializing in robotic surgery for urologic cancer, with a particular emphasis on prostate cancer, Dr. Jensen has performed over a thousand robotic radical prostatectomies, many of them at the Edwards Comprehensive Cancer Center. According to industry statistics, he is among the top 20 robotic surgeons in the world.

Yesterday. Today. Tomorrow.

Your Partners for Life.

For more than a decade, Cabell Huntington Hospital and Marshall Health have been regional leaders in minimally invasive surgery. The numerous patient benefits the procedures offer include shorter hospital stays, less post-operative pain, faster recovery, less risk of infection, decreased blood loss, less scarring and a quicker return to normal activities.

Today, the Institute for Minimally Invasive Surgery is advancing the science and practice of surgical procedures. Our hospital's Robotics Surgical Center features three da Vinci Xi® systems, providing surgeons with unparalleled precision, dexterity and control.

In addition, the Institute for Minimally Invasive Surgery encompasses a wide range of non-robotic procedures including endoscopy and laparoscopy. It covers multiple services such as orthopaedic, cardiac, oncology, gynecology, radiology and gastroenterology.

I'M DRIVEN.

I AM A DAUGHTER OF MARSHALL.

Determination is a key element in the study and practice of medicine. And, in life. Medical students like Emily M. Wright, Class of 2019, are driven by a desire to help others.
